Analysis of the defects logged and a definite recommendation provided as to the disposition of the application:

The defects logged illustrates different issues that affects the working and performance of the application. Few of these issues are important as it severely affects the features while others are minor such as design faults. Simultaneously, the issues that keeps on recurring shows up that feature testing is not accomplished correctly.

The recommendation about application's usage is that all the major defects should be tested thoroughly and should be fixed on priority basis. If there is possibility of delaying the release of the application until all fixes are accomplished then the application becomes bug-free, stable, reliable and user-friendly to utilize it. Also, if there is improvement of communication between testers and developers then it can be helpful to avoid issue in future.
